"Pressestimmen 'Doctors may describe diseases and their effects from the outside; only patients can describe them from the inside. Such descriptions, which Anne Hunsaker Hawkins calls 'pathographies,' take the form of vivid personal accounts, often of journeys into a fearful realm of sickness. Reconstructing Illness is a beautifully written and profound consideration of the range of such pathographies, their organizing myths and metaphors, and the light they cast on what it means to be human in the face of illness.' --Oliver Sacks'Anne Hunsaker Hawkins's Reconstructing Illness is an intelligent and insightful consideration of what she characterizes as a new literary genre.' Times Literary Supplement --Times Literary Supplement'The book has earned an important place in courses on medical practices as well as courses treating any of the various relationships between story and healing and is accessible and engaging enough to be useful to all who struggle with serious illness.' Medical Humanities Review --Medical Humanities Review'Hawkins . . . argues convincingly that today's 'pathographies' are replacing the stories of religious conversion that were popular in earlier eras . . . The observations about contemporary culture and our feelings about death and illness are plausible and intriguing, and the writing is clear.' Publishers Weekly --Publishers Weekly Synopsis Demonstrates that 'only when we hear both the doctor's and the patient's voice will we have a medicine that is truly human'. The second edition of this text features a revised and expanded appendix and an additional chapter on the myths of self-narrative and ethical concerns. Über den Autor und weitere Mitwirkende Anne Hunsaker Hawkins, Ph.D. Professor, Department of Humanities; Director, The Doctors Kienle Center for Humanistic Medicine Ph.D., University of Rochester, 1978"
