Our inner child is a part of us that still looks at the world with wonder, still gets excited and is still vibrantly enthusiastic about being alive. In our modern, adult world our inner child is frequently unwanted, a nuisance and even a problem. Learning how to relate to our inner-child, to share and understand the sensitive, feeling nature that we all too often have to squash down in our present world of work and family responsibilities, is a perceptive, precious and private process. Our inner-child may be locked away inside us for fear of abuse or shame. This journal in the creating journal series is all about forming a relationship with the sensitive, innocent and unlimited potential of your inner-child, who can enliven your life, unlock your restrictive attitudes and revitalise you. But first you need a sacred space in which to parent your inner-child and show that it is safe to come out. An inner-child journal can be that space and I hope you find it is.
