Shanghai, la concession française dans les années trente. Les sociétés secrètes qui dominent la ville se livrent une lutte sans merci pour prendre le contrôle du marché de l'opium et régner sur la Chine. Shuisheng, un jeune paysan de dix-sept ans, cousin pauvre du Patron de la Compagnie-des-quatres-mers est mis dès son arrivée dans la ville au service de la favorite de ce dernier. Candide au pays du crime, il sera l'instrument de cruelles vengeances avant de retourner en sa faveur les rouages de l'Organisation. Un Parrain où les robes des mandarins auraient supplanté les borsalinos. Ce roman aux odeurs de corruption, est avant tout un portrait du Shanghai de la belle époque où la puissance, la peur et la trahison font se jeter les uns contre les autres ceux qui hier étaient frères. Au croisement du roman noir et de la satire politique (derrière Tian on reconnaît le Grand Timonier), Li Xiao frappe à l'arme blanche et nous entraîne dans un savant jeu de go.
