Una sorta di taccuino di viaggio è quello che propone Kate McBride, scrittrice e artista canadese: le sensazioni, gli attimi, le impressioni e i sentimenti vissuti durante i soggiorni e i viaggi sono stati fermati in poesie e polaroid. I versi, con il ritmo delle parole, e le immagini, veloci e "impressioniste", evocano le città e i luoghi, i colori, i profumi, le persone, da Parigi a Firenze, dall'Oceano Pacifico all'Andalusia. Le poesie sono "schizzi", note raccolte sul posto per non perdere gli attimi, e le fotografie - scattate con una Spectra - fissano frammenti di esperienze che tutti, per quanto con occhi diversi, hanno avuto occasione di vivere. La poesia, da momento privato dell'autore, diventa così un momento di lettura che smuove i ricordi e le sensazioni.

But here the gap the nothingness is also predicated on the journey and the return that changes the domestic space itself so as the poet slips into bed figuring himself as a dreamed and self deprecating god 60 61 hi
