"Pressestimmen What is most commendable about this 'snapshot' of Sprouse's work is that there is very little text involved, which allows the reader to focus on the designer's work rather than any expository explanation of it.--Jeffrey Felner 'New York Journal of Books 'this more intimate affair lets us delve deeply into Sprouse's creative process, dreams, and aspirations. With scans of fabric swatches and cryptic notes flanking glorious marker and pencil sketches, readers get a peek into the glam god's xeroxed world.--Alexander Cavaluzzo 'Hyperallergic 'Some of late fashion designer Stephen Sprouse's work--like those graffiti-style bags for Louis Vuitton--are unforgettable. But some of the work the New York-based designer did has never been seen before. Until now.--Meaghan Hartland 'DuJour 'This 208-page compendium of sketches, drawings, and copy machine art paints a vibrant portrait of an incredibly prolific member of Warhol's infamous factory.--Noah Silverstein 'Elle Magazine ' Über den Autor und weitere Mitwirkende He was 14 years old when he began sketching for designer Bill Blass, and in the 1980s Sprouse worked with Andy Warhol on a collection inspired by Warhol's 'Camouflage' series of paintings. Sprouse reemerged in the 1990s, but it was his 2001-02 graffiti-motif clothing (for Target) and handbags (for Louis Vuitton) that fueled his reputation as a design pioneer. Sprouse also clothed a former neighbor--Debbie Harry of Blondie. He worked extensively with the band Duran Duran at the end of the 1980s"
